

Employment

They [economists Paul Beaudry, David Green and Benjamin Sand] show that since 2000 the share of employment accounted for by high-skilled jobs in America has been falling. As a result, college-educated workers are taking on jobs that are cognitively less demanding, displacing less educated workers.

Economist, January 14, 2017